Nuneham Courtney is a charming riverside village situated on the banks of the Thames about six miles from Oxford. The parish church, dedicated to All Saints, is modern, but the disused edifice of an earlier building with the same dedication still stands near the river. This latter was erected by Simon, first Earl Harcourt, who had destroyed an even earlier foundation of the same name. In the grounds of Nuneham Park is the Conduit, formerly standing in the Carfax, Oxford.
